Methodology

FIRE contracted with YouGov, a nonpartisan polling and research firm, to conduct a national online survey of 1,250 undergraduate students who currently attend a two- or four-year educational institution in the United States. Survey respondents were participants in YouGov's online, opt-in research panel, consisting of about 1.8 million individuals.

YouGov used an online survey to interview 1,395 undergraduate students between May 25, 2017 and June 8, 2017. Respondents were offered incentives from YouGov in exchange for completing the survey.

The final dataset was created by matching responses down to a sample of 1,250 observations based on a sampling frame constructed using the 2013 American Community Survey. After the matching process, YouGov calculated weights for each response based on the respondent's gender, race, and age. The frame was constructed by stratified sampling from the full 2013 American Community Survey (ACS) sample with selection within strata by weighted sampling with replacements (using the person weights on the public use file).

The matched cases were weighted to the sampling frame using propensity scores. The matched cases and the frame were combined and a logistic regression was estimated for inclusion in the frame. The propensity score function included age, gender, race/ethnicity, years of education, and geographic region. The propensity scores were grouped into deciles of the estimated propensity score in the frame and post-stratified according to these deciles. The weights were then post-stratified to a three-way stratification of gender, four-category race, and three-category age, to produce the final weight.

Important Notes

FIRE thanks you for your interest in our study of college students' attitudes toward expression on campus. We provide this data for public use to increase general knowledge and scholarly research on the attitudes of college students and expression. Any organization or individual may use the questions from this survey, in whole or in part, for future surveys or research, without requesting permission from FIRE. Any organization or individual may use the data from this survey for future research or replication without requesting permission from FIRE; however, we ask that you cite the data using the suggested citation provided on this Codebook's Title Page.<sup>1</sup>

If you choose to use this data for further replication or research, please read the entire Methodology, Important Notes, and Survey Questionnaire sections of this Codebook first, as these provide a wealth of information about the research process that went into the creation of this dataset. Descriptive statistics from the dataset can be found in the tabulations, topline, and report, accessible on FIRE's website.<sup>2</sup>

To protect the identity of the survey respondents, the data has been cleaned in a variety of ways, listed here:

- The caseid variable provided in this dataset has been changed from the caseid variable provided by YouGov.
- All open response variables, or variables in which the respondent was able to specify a text answer, have been deleted from the dataset. These include questions Q49 - Q51 in which respondents were asked to define and provide examples of hate speech.
- The respondent's state of residence was removed from the dataset and the respondent's census region was included in lieu of their state of residence.

Many of the demographic variables in this dataset were provided to FIRE by YouGov. YouGov keeps up-to-date demographic information on their survey respondents. For the full survey instrument that we used for this survey, please see the Survey Questionnaire section of this document.

The Institutional Review Board (IRB) of the Harvard University-Area determined that this survey project is not human subjects research as defined by DHHS or FDA regulations.

There is a copy error in the Questionnaire section of the physical and digital copy of the "Speaking Freely" report. On page 23 of the report,<sup>3</sup> Q16 shows that we provided respondents

February 2019 Update:

We added an additional inputstate variable so that research can be completed on questions related to geographic location. New information about this variable can be found in the “Variable List” and “Codebook” sections of this document.

FIRE's mission is to defend and sustain the individual rights of students and faculty members at America's colleges and universities. These rights include freedom of speech, freedom of association, due process, legal equality, religious liberty, and sanctity of conscience—the essential qualities of liberty. FIRE educates students, faculty, alumni, trustees, and the public about the threats to these rights on our campuses, and provides the means to preserve them.
